Powerwashing: Regular Maintenance Should Be Routine

Your home is most likely your prized possession. Unfortunately, over a period of time, exterior surfaces collect dirt and debris due to weather and use. Powerwashing is the most efficient method to get rid of this surface dirt.

"Regular maintenance is the best way to enhance the beauty and value of your property and investment," says Matt Gallagher, owner, Squeaky Clean Services, Inc., located in Glenside, PA, or online at www.scssince1986.com "Routine powerwashing will clean all surfaces and have your exterior looking like new again."

Besides the exterior of your home, you may also want to consider powerwashing the following outdoor parts of your home.

1. Concrete
2. Decks
3. Fences
4. Flagstone and slate
5. Gutters
6. Patios
7. Stone
8. Pavers
9. Stamped concrete

Mother Nature can ruin any or all of these parts of your home over time. Dirt, grime and mildew can collect on your home and if not cleaned in a timely fashion, they can cause costly repairs, renovations and replacement of materials.

By properly cleaning the exterior of your home, you will protect its surfaces and provide any necessary restoration needed to keep it looking fresh and new. The appearance and longevity of your home will greatly improve after the powerwashing process.

Many companies also offer environmentally-safe materials for cleaning.
